Stevenson's Germany, the case against Germany in the Pacific, by C. Brunndon Fletcher ... London, W. Heinemann, 1930.
xv, 280 p. 22".

"This volume concludes the argument against Germany begun in 'The new Pacific' and continued through 'The problem of the Pacific'. It is also an effort to place Robert Louis Stevenson before the world as an important witness in the case. To get Stevenson into the witness box has the history of Germany's thirty years of intrigue and imperialism before he reached Hawaii, has to be told."—Author's pref.

Nouvel examen des questions suivantes de police médicale: Est-il cas où, d'après l'expérience, l'accouchement prématuré artificiel est avantageux à la mère et à l'enfant, et où, par conséquent, il est non-seulement inutile, mais encore nécessaire? Quels sont ces cas, et quels sont ceux où il faut recourir à d'autres opérations? Quelles sont les conditions qui peuvent rendre utile à la mère et à l'enfant l'accouchement prématuré artificiel, et quelles sont les précautions à prendre en l'entrepre-nant? Par m. le professeur Fodéré. (Strasbourg, Impr. de Levrault, 1829.)

Autentisch der Auszeichnung mitgedruckter kultur in Brln herausgegeben von der Deutschen gesellschaft für wissenschaft und kunst in Brln, 1925. It contains a number of serious typographical errors in the text and margin.

The work printed in 1496 at Brln, probably by Conrad Stabel and Mathias Preussner, was plagiarized from the signed tract of Hans Folz. First published, probably, by himself at Nuremberg ca. 1490. The reprint varies considerably from the original in spelling, and omits 29 lines (730 verses) based of 1201 including the name of the author Hans Folz, at end, and the alternative title: Ein gute lere von allen wittenden.

There are three prefatory pieces in the manuscript. The probable Dedication to the Duke of Norfolk and an argument, and an epilogue. This manuscript with its corrections is apparently the one on which MS. 95, Univ. coll. Oxford, is based.

This manuscript apparently changed hands many times: in 1606, it belonged to the Earl of Stamford, in July 1618 was in the Lord's sale by Richer, became Phillips' on Mar. 22, 1661, and was purchased by the Bodleian library from Quaritch on Mar. 27, 1898. of A summary catalogue of western manuscripts in the Bodleian library at Oxford.
